Sec. Def Wants "Team Operation"

Top Pentagon officials are agreed that interservice rivalry has been over-emphasized and that it has both good and bad points. But, at the same time, Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy has let it be known that he expects a "team operation."

Reserves Fear "Stabbing," Says ROA Head

Strongly worded charges are directed against the Department of Defense and the Bureau of the Budget by Brig. Gen. de Lesseps S. Morrison, Mayor of New Orleans and National President of the Reserve Officers Association. He makes this attack, in an exclusive statement to THE JOURNAL, on the eve of the ROA's meeting in Washington, D. C.

Budget Bureau Field Marshals?

Strong charges have been made during recent weeks that the Bureau of the Budget has usurped some Congressional responsibility for funding Armed Forces activities by the "apportionment" technique. BoB officials deny this. Whatever the outcome of the dispute, changes in budgeting and administration of military programs appear certain.

Confirmations Set Capitol Record

The Senate this week set a record as it approved a massive list of 29,083 nominations in all the Services, including 144 advancements to general and flag ranks.

836 Nurses-Specialists Advance

The Army, taking action under new Nurse-AMSC Career legislation, has chosen 836 officers for permanent promotions. It's a result of a measure that was advocated by President Eisenhower to encourage retention of Nurses and Medical Specialists.

Coast Guard Capt. Richard M. Ross has been chosen for promotion to rear admiral. President Eisenhower has sent to the Senate the nomination of 92 other Coast Guard officers for promotions.

Increased Fuel Purchase Foreseen

Stepped up activity in all military services will place increased demands on the fuel purchasing activity of the Military Petroleum Supply Agency in Washington, D. C. SAC dispersal will bring increased MPSA contracts for fuel storage and a reshuffling of storage facilities already in existence. Peak fuel purchases are expected in FY 1959.

RA Commissions Reach 4,578 Mark As Fifth List Integrates 1,503 Reserves

Augmentation Names, P. 4

THE Army's augmentation program moved a final giant stride forward this week as 1503 Reserve officers were designated for Regular ranks.

The new selections—the fifth list to be announced—includes 1 colonel appointment, 11 lieutenant colonels, 169 majors, 993 captains, 215 first lieutenants and 214 second lieutenants.

This brings to a total of 4,578 the number of Reserve officers given permanent ranks under the augmentation program.

Including the new list, there have been two colonel appointments, 43 lieutenant colonels, 532 majors, 1,699 captains, 1,010 first lieutenants and 1,292 second lieutenants.

The Air Force has named approximately 18,000 Reserve officers for Regular ranks.

PROFICIENCY PAY BY 15 FEBRUARY?

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy is anxious to get the ageing Proficiency Pay Advancement plan under way before Congress begins hearings on the military pay bill.

As a consequence, there appears a good possibility that the Secretary, his burden of Congressional testimony a bit eased, will implement the enlisted pay grade advancement program next week.

If the Pentagon fails to take quick action, Members of Congress will demand to know how morale can be enhanced by promising proficiency pay increases, as former Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson did last May, and then not doing something about it.

Further, there is no question that the Cordiner Committee's strong recommendation for creation of two new enlisted grades, E-8 and E-9, would be given an important push forward with the start of proficiency pay. For the fact is that at present there is no way to give PPA's to some of the most highly skilled men in uniform, those in E-7 rank.

Pay Hearings Loom This Month; Much More Than Raise Involved

Term Contract Switch, Page 27

A HOUSE Armed Services Subcommittee under Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex) is shooting for a mid-February start for hearings on the President's $518,000,000 military pay raise request.

But much more than pay will be involved in forthcoming Congressional action.

Major changes in the management of military manpower are in prospect.

The fundamental issue is, of course, the proposal for adoption of a modern military compensation system, with prospective increases for both officers and enlisted men ranging upwards of $100 per month in many cases.

Beyond the President's appeal for more equitable treatment of career military personnel, which would be assured by the Administration's broadening of the Cordiner Committee Report to provide minimum 6% increases for everyone on active duty with at least two years service, there will be recommendations for significant changes in career patterns.

It is known that the Department of Defense has under consideration a legis-

UNDER DISCUSSION—

1. Selection for retention after 20 years service.
2. Forced retirement for permanent lieutenant colonels with 26 years service and 5 years in grade.
3. Similar mandatory retirement for brigadier generals with 30 and 5.
4. Authority for "outstanding" out-of-line permanent promotions.

lative proposal designed to vitalize the Officer Personnel Act.

The major change currently being studied by the Services would provide that all officers—Regulars and Reserve alike—would be subject to retirement after 20 years service.

The procedure would be to "select for retention" officers who would be continued on active duty and to retire the others who did not come up to qualifications the Services needed or who would not likely be able to assume higher responsibilities.

The ratio of officers to be retained beyond 20 years would depend, of course, to a large extent on authorized manpower ceilings.

In effect, the plan now under consideration would duplicate the Navy's proposal in its "hump" legislation to accelerate retirements for many officers. However, it is not seen likely that any Defense Department legislation that might be submitted would propose "constructive service"—that is pay credit for years that were not served on active duty because of early retirement.

Another possible recommendation is a change in current law which would force the retirement of lieutenant colonels with

USAF List To Major, Page 8

The Air Force, keeping its promotion pace right on schedule, this week released the names of 1272 captains selected for temporary major. This follows earlier release of more than 4300 selections to temporary captain.

All the temporary advancements, including those to be announced to lieutenant colonel and colonel, will be made by 30 April.

NAVY-AF CONFERENCE—RAdm. John W. Crumpacker, Commanding Officer of the Naval Aviation Supply Office at Philadelphia, Pa., and Brig. Gen. George E. ## Rivalry "Both Harmful And Wholesome" But SecDef McElroy Asks "Team Operation"

Interservice rivalry has been "over-emphasized in the public eye," but there is an inclination on the part of certain officers to "overplay" the importance of their individual Services.

These are the views of the two top officials in the Pentagon: Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy and Deputy Secretary Donald A. Quarles.

Both have told the House Armed Services Committee that so-called rivalry has not, to their knowledge, impeded the missile program, and, in fact, that competition among the Services probably has accelerated progress in the missile field.

Some Rivalry Not Healthy

They also agree that there has been some rivalry which is not completely healthy. But Secretary McElroy said he has let it be known that he is out to get a "team operation" and, although he is not looking for trouble, he is "willing to face it." This, he said, is resulting in a more cooperative effort.

Excerpts from testimony taken behind closed doors and recently released by the House Committee puts the two Defense Department officials on record as follows:

Secretary McElroy's Views

Secretary McElroy said: "There is a good deal of feeling—some of which I do not share—that there has been an impediment to the development of missiles because of excessive interservice rivalry and that kind of thing." This public impression is "rather widespread," he said, but "it could be equally well maintained that the output of effort by the individual Services in their development work might even have accelerated the development of an operation intermediate range ballistic missile."

Asked what harmful rivalry he has found, Secretary McElroy replied, "I have been taking the other side of the one a bit because I feel as if I observe in the case of the joint development of the IRBM by the Army and Air Force the extreme probability that you have in this country been able to get earlier deployments of both missiles than you would have had without that competition."

"Now I have to reverse my field a little bit, I would suggest some improvements that could be made in the respect. For example, it seems to me that there is an inclination on the part of certain officers to somewhat overplay in their speeches the importance of an individual Service as compared with the importance of a combined effort. I think that on the whole, however, I am not going to magnify that as something that is a serious interference with the effectiveness of the Department of Defense."

Replying to the question, "What have you done to end interservice disputes?" Secretary McElroy said, "Well, I have done this. I have felt, myself, that with reasonable people—I expect that people are reasonable until proved otherwise—that you can work with them to get an operation which is a team operation. In my judgment, the kind of a steady working of that kind and, hopefully, understanding that the Secretary is not looking for trouble, but quite willing to face it if it is around, has gradually developed a considerably more cooperative working relationship among those people that are in the Services."

Secretary Quarles' Views

Secretary Quarles told the Committee: "There is, of course, a rivalry between the Services. It is keen and, of course, among individuals, it takes various forms. There are individuals who become all excited in this football game that they are playing and they certainly break the rules at times and when they do, it gets to be harmful, and there have been instances of harmful rivalry between the Services, or of rivalry between the Services having harmful results."

"Of course, we must be careful here because this kind of competition also has some wholesome characteristics and it stimulates, it produces a high state of morale and energy."

"So to say that it is all harmful, I think, would be to give quite a wrong impression."

"My own feeling is that we have more of the harmful kind than we should have and that in large measure it grows out of organizational problems more than it grows out of individual problems."

"It grows out of the fact that organizations give individuals an opportunity or at least makes them feel they have an opportunity to accomplish something for their Service by some kind of maneuver that we don't consider proper."

"Best Balance" Sought

"This is, I think, the most important reason why we want to study the organization so closely, to make sure that we achieve the best balance we can between Services and their strong, more and competitive instinct and at the same time not have it carry so far as to produce these unfortunate results."

"And we are undertaking to do this and I would expect that we would be at least some measures by which the situation could be improved, although I don't mean to imply by that that the would necessarily be drastic measures."

Secretary Quarles agreed with Secretary McElroy that he is not aware of any delay in the ballistic missile program which has been caused by interservice rivalry and that, "if anything, one can assume that the competition has, in fact, accelerated progress in this field."

CAPABILITIES . . . Manpower, Tools and Experience

Beechcraft's new target plane, pictured above as it leaves its special transportable catapult, offers maximum performance to all of the Armed Services of the United States. It is just one of an entire new family of rocket, turbo-jet, and supercharged powered craft being developed at Beech.

Here are just three occasions where this craft may be used: in procurement of information from behind enemy lines—either during the day or at night; for use as an operational target plane with ground or air launching—and with speeds up to 320 miles per hour; as a vehicle to deliver supplies to isolated combat units. It is now being delivered as the XKDB-1 to the Navy as a target aircraft.

Other Beech projects include research and development work on launching and recovery systems for missiles, drones, and manned aircraft; engineering test programs on aircraft emergency escape systems; and classified projects in the advanced fields of aerodynamics, cryogenics, thermodynamics, and aircraft range extension.

To put Beechcraft's capabilities to work to solve your research, development or production problems, telephone or write the Contract Administration Division today.

NEXT WEEK—

Training for Attrition

High rates of personnel turnover are hampering the Air Defense Command in its vital task of being prepared to ward off attack from the air. This problem is being intensified by the advent of atomic air-to-air missiles and the installation of highly complicated SAGE units.

An on-the-spot report from a JOURNAL staff member at the Colorado Springs, Colo., Headquarters of the Air Defense Command will tell this story in next week's issue.

PX In Action

Another feature in the 8 February issue will be a report on the Army-Air Force Exchange Service (see editorial, Page 10), under command of Maj. Gen. Harlan C. Parks, USAF, with headquarters in New York City.

This global operation has a vital impact on the morale of every military family.

Shifts In Service

BRIG. GEN. JAMES S. CATHROE, USAF, who has been Deputy Assistant for Dental Services, moved up 31 January to succeed retiring Maj. Gen. Marvin E. Kennebeck as Assistant for Dental Services under Maj. Gen. Dan C. Ogle, Air Force Surgeon General. He has been in military service since 1928, following graduation from Creighton Dental School in Nebraska.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM C. WESTMORELAND, USA, who has been Secretary of the General Staff, will succeed Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Sherburne, Jr., as Commanding General of the 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky., on 1 April. General Sherburne goes to Europe. General Westmoreland is a '36 USMA graduate. His selection to head the 101st, announced 23 January, was forecast in THE JOURNAL on 18 January.

RADM. JAMES R. LEE, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Personnel Control this month will succeed RADM. Kenneth Craig as Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel and Assistant Chief of the Bureau Of Naval Personnel. Admiral Craig will take command of Carrier Division Two in March.

Admiral Lee's successor will be Capt. Ray C. Needham, who is currently serving as Deputy, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Personnel Control. Captain Needham has been selected for two-star rank.

DONALD M. LIBBY of Portland has been named Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army for Maine. Manager of the Portland district of the Central Maine Power Company, he served in the Army during WWI as an enlisted man. He received a commission in the Army Reserve in 1919, and had advanced to the rank of major when he entered on active duty in January 1941. During WWII, Mr. Libby served as Supply and Evacuation Staff Officer, Mediterranean Theater of Operations, and later, Chief of Civil Supply Branch of G-4 (Quartermaster) Division, Allied Forces Headquarters, and as General Purchasing Agent for the U. S. Army in the Mediterranean Area. He retired from the Army Reserve in September 1956 with the rank of Colonel.

MAJ. GEN. EMERSON C. ITSCHNER, Chief of Army Engineers, has been chosen President of the Society of American Military Engineers for the term starting in May.

Pentagon And Budget Bureau Come Under Sharp Attack By Reserve Officers Association President; Cites "Stab" Charge

BY BRIG. GEN. deLESSEPS S. MORRISON, USAF, National President, Reserve Officers Association

ONE day last week, a longtime Reservist, after reading his morning newspaper and having his second cup of coffee, sat at his desk and wrote to ROA's National Headquarters. His letter read:

"In 1954 I dropped out of the association. I served in World War II overseas and then was called back for service in Korea. I had decided it was hazardous being too prominent in the Reserves. Enclosed is my check; please restore me to membership. I realize that I am shirking my duty as a citizen if I do not support my association. I have finished my military service, but I do not believe I can escape my obligation as a Citizen-Soldier."

We who view with alarm the future of the Reserves have been saying this to the nation's Reserve officers for the past several months. It is regrettable that more of the half-million Citizen-Reservists have not awakened to the dangers before this. The fact that a handful are now responding in the above manner is encouraging.

Citizens Come Out Fighting

It is the American way that any citizen responds to attacks by coming out fighting.

That accounts for the new spirit which is moving the ROA, and the Reserves, in these critical days.

For the Reserve tradition, the Minute Man concept, the Citizen-Leader program is unquestionably under attack as rarely before in our history.

It will be a subject of examination and review when ROA's National Council meets in Washington 7, 8, and 9 February. This position of the Reserves, in the highest level of policy-making for the nation, is a transcendent problem which overshadows all other questions which will be included in our deliberations.

Those of us who are close to the Reserve picture are astonished when we come face to face with the realization that most Citizens—and most Citizen-Reservists—view askance our statement that the Reserves are fighting for their lives.

Reserve Program Damaged

Let me list, therefore, in utmost brevity a few of the acts within recent months which have damaged the Reserve program:

1. The Department of Defense dropped from its parttime payroll, even in the face of a Congressional desire to continue the system, Reserve Officers attending USAR Schools—considered the top-ranking agencies of military instruction in the entire Reserve Training Program.

2. At the same time, cut off the parttime payroll (12 paydays per year) were the "Mobilization Designees," especially selected and skilled Reserve Officers who are ready to step into a military "slot" promptly with the opening of any emergency.

3. With no warning, and with little notice (in case of Army, only 60 days), some 7,000 Reserve Officers were cut loose from the Standing Force in a

Brig. Gen. Twitchell Is USAF Surgeon

Brig. Gen. Harold H. Twitchell, CONAC Command Surgeon at Mitchel AFB, N. Y., since September 1955, flew to Germany this week to become Command Surgeon for USAF, at Weisbaden. Assuming duties as CONAC's new Surgeon is Col. A. H. Corliss, former surgeon of the First Air Force at Mitchel.

General Twitchell, 53, received a Doctor of Medicine degree in 1929 from the University of Vermont Medical College.

"RIF" (Reduction in Force) action which even a top Defense Secretary said didn't "make much sense."

4. The Administration's Budget-makers sharply reduced the funds for the Reserve Training program, inevitably forcing

5. A sharp cutback in Civilian Component strength.

Reserves "Are Being Stabbed"

Thousands of citizens, not all of whom are Reserve Officers, are genuinely concerned about the apparent failure of unification in the Armed Services. Many feel that the Reserves are being stabbed, while public attention is focused on the hysteria resulting from the appearance of "Sputnik" and the great clamor for more advancement in the missiles field.

It certainly cannot be denied that the nation's security suffers from inter-service knife throwing; we in the Reserves, although innocent bystanders in a sense, are convinced that Pentagon pre-occupation with the issue of the need for Defense reform, and the charge that the Joint Chiefs of Staff system has resulted in a muddling of our preparedness program, has almost done us in.

For the truth is, it is difficult to sense that anyone in authority is listening to us.

Too many of those who are listening misunderstand us.

When Col. John T. Carlton, ROA's Executive Director, appeared recently before the House Armed Services Committee Number One (Brooks Committee), during the review of the RIF program, he prefaced his testimony with a statement which solidly epitomizes ROA's position. He said:

"Mr. Chairman, as members of this Committee know, the Reserve Officers Association for 36 years has worked for the development of sound military policy for this nation. Our aim has been to support adequate military preparedness, enabling this country to defend itself against any aggressor; our principal and sole constitutional objective is to serve the interests of national security."

"May I emphasize here today, Mr. Chairman, that if this Committee and the Congress, in this age of Sputnik, the growing importance of missiles and the development of nuclear weapons systems, should decide that this nation no longer needs the Reserves, we would be the first to welcome the opportunity to put our uniforms in mothballs for all time and to join in the celebration of this happy millennium."

"Permit me also to make clear that we are not seeking, nor engaging in quarrels with the Regular Services. We seriously consider that as officers in the civilian components we are in fact, as well as law, part of these Services and we are proud of our roles as such. We seek to work with the officers in command and with the civilian authorities in these Services to the end that we may better serve our country. We enjoy warm friendships, most cordial relations generally, and harmonious cooperation at the Pentagon. We expect this to continue. We have given these authorities our support many times during the 36 years of our existence, but we don't always agree. We disagree very sharply with the decisions and the policies in this recent Reduction-in-Force program. We think the Pentagon is wrong. We have told them so; they have no doubt about our stand with regard to this issue. Many individuals in the Services agree with us. If they had not been given pointed directives, these ill-conceived cuts would not

"ROA IS NOT INTERESTED SO MUCH IN FINDING FAULT and in aiming recriminations as we are in seeking a permanent solution to the problems raised, to the end that there never again will be a 'Crash' RIF program entailing as it has hardships, injustices, the compounding of inequities and the destruction of the taxpayers' investments representing many millions of dollars in the training and experience of the officers who are being sidelined. We say this especially out of our concern for national security. These Reserve Officers are not a separate entity; they represent 60 to 75 per cent of the leadership of our Standing Forces; without them we would have a military force which would be virtually impotent."

"The word is out among the Reserve Officers in this nation that accepting a call to Active Duty is very hazardous, indeed. How can you expect any civilian officer to go into the military service if he has not assurance that he will be kept even for the duration of the period for which he is called."

Morale Must Be Restored

"ROA considers it of vital necessity that our Defense authorities and others with a responsibility in this field find some way to restore morale to the nation's Reserve Officers, and to establish a degree of stability to the program in which they train and serve."

What is true about the Active Duty Reserve Officers, also is true of those who belong to the various type Reserve training units.

Whether a Citizen-Soldier gives his full time, or two hours a week, to military service, he still is entitled to know where he is going, for how long, and under what conditions. To the degree that this is possible in the military service, the Reserve Officer will demand that certainty.

We think the Congress—and upon reflection, the Pentagon—will agree with us.

For the Reservists themselves, we would be the first to say that they also need to reflect upon their obligations.

The term, "Citizen-Reservist," is not just a catch phrase. We must be citizens first—through ROA we exercise that citizenship.

PENTAGON CENSORS BLUE-LINE THE JOURNAL

THE JOURNAL has scored a newsbeat on Pentagon censors charged with the responsibility of eliminating classified information from the printed transcripts of testimony taken behind closed doors by the House Armed Services Committee.

Censored testimony released by the Committee shows this exchange between Representative Richard E. Lankford (D-Md) and Deputy Secretary of Defense Donald A. Quarles:

Mr. Lankford—Mr. Quarles, Secretary McElroy said the other day that the Polaris—the Navy Polaris—project was about two years ahead of schedule. And yesterday I was reading a recent issue of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL, which reported an interview with Admiral Raborn, who is in charge of the Polaris project.

Secretary Quarles—Yes, sir.

Mr. Lankford—In which it is reported that Admiral Raborn credited this two-year advance to his management system, which was unique in this field. He pointed out that there are only, as I recall it, (deleted) officers and 75 civilians engaged in this project...

THE JOURNAL had reported (11 January) that 45 officers are assigned to the Task Force. The information was given freely by RADM William F. Raborn, Jr. There was no indication that it was or is classified.

Hercules Set For June Deployment; Army Tells Cold Weather Test Plans

The new NIKE HERCULES missile system will go on an operational basis in four selected areas next June. The defenses which will be the first to establish Hercules firing capabilities are New York, Washington-Baltimore, Chicago, and Philadelphia.

The HERCULES systems will be located at converted NIKE AJAX sites operated by elements of the United States Army Air Defense Command. These systems will be able to fire missiles carrying both high explosive and atomic warheads.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS and the U. S. Army announced that a series of cold weather trials of Army Guided Missiles will be conducted at Ft. Churchill, Manitoba. Missile systems being tested are the HERCULES, and the LACROSSE surface-to-surface field army missile system which is being fitted with a variety of warheads.

THE COMBAT SURVEILLANCE AGENCY has moved from the Pentagon to new quarters at 1124 Highland Street, Arlington, Va. The Agency directs the development of electronic equipment and techniques for gaining battlefield information about the enemy. USACSA is under the jurisdiction of the Army Chief Signal Officer, Maj. Gen. J. D. O'Connell, and is commanded by Brig. Gen. W. M. Thames.

2D LT. JAMES J. BARBER, former 86th Infantry Division corporal, has been named by the New York Community Trust as winner of the Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award for 1958.

The award is made annually to a top graduating student of the Infantry Officer Candidate School, Ft. Benning, Ga. He will receive the award from Under Secretary of the Army Charles C. Finu cane at the Pentagon on 12 February, the birthday of the late Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson.

Army Chooses 1,503 Reserves For Regulars; 893 Are Named For Perm. Captain

THE following are the names of the 1503 Reserve officers chosen this week for Regular Army appointments. Where no rank is indicated, the appointment is in the permanent grade of captain.

An asterisk before an officer's name indicates that he is serving in a temporary grade that is higher than the one to which he was appointed in the Regular Army. A double asterisk indicates that an officer holds temporary status two ranks above his new permanent designation.

Trying to save a $10 bill could cost you thousands # from accidents like these...

Accidents can happen anytime, anywhere. Your golf ball strikes the caddy... your bullet hits another hunter... your children break a neighbor's picture window... your wife scalds a guest with hot coffee... your dog bites the mailman... the milkman breaks a leg on your back porch.

These accidents, and many more, can result in costly judgments that may run into the thousands.

Now for the first time, USAA, serving the Armed Forces officer with low cost automobile insurance since 1922, makes available

THE USAA COMPREHENSIVE PERSONAL LIABILITY POLICY

With this new CPL policy you get financial protection against everyday accidents that might happen at or away from your home. Accidents that might injure another person or through negligence cause damage to the property of others.

For as little as $10 a year you can have the new CPL policy giving you $10,000 liability coverage and meeting medical payments up to $250. For less than three cents a day additional cost liability coverage of $50,000 can be provided and medical payments coverage increased to $1,000. Higher limits are also available at nominal cost as are many additional coverages.

USAA employs no agents. It is a non-profit insurance association under the direction of active and retired officers of the Armed Services. All selling is by mail and the resulting savings are passed on to policyholders. USAA affiliated claims services are located in all areas where the CPL policy is offered.

Don't delay. Write today for application blank and descriptive folder of the new USAA Comprehensive Personal Liability Policy. Be protected from costly every day accidents.

The USAA Membership is limited to active and retired officers, cadets, and warrant officers of the following Services of the United States of America: Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, Coast and Geodetic Survey; officers and warrant officers of the National Guard and the Reserve components, when ordered to extended active Federal duty and as long as they retain their commissions, and Foreign Service Officers of the Department of State. The widows of such officers and warrant officers may insure with USAA so long as their status is not changed by remarriage.

Marine Corps Seeks Pilot Integrations

Marine Corps Headquarters is accepting applications from Reservists pilots for integration into the Regulars.

Applicants must be on active duty, be a designated Naval Aviator or student pilot, and physically qualified to perform all sea and field grade. In addition, they must have an initial date of rank as 2d lieutenant in either the 1955 (5 June 1954-3 June 1955) or 1956 (4 June 1955-1 June 1956) year groups.

Applications, which are to be forwarded through the chain of command, must reach Headquarters by 1 June to receive consideration. Selection will be made later that month.

The applications should be sent, along with an endorsement and a medical examination report, to the Commandant (Code DPB).

HOTSHOT READIED

The fastest and hottest wind tunnel in use by private industry, with speeds up to 15,000 miles an hour and temperatures 6,000 degrees hotter than the sun's surface, is being built at Lockheed's Missile Systems Division laboratories at Palo Alto, Calif.

Known as a "hotshot" tunnel because of the extreme speeds and temperatures, it will be used to speed development of the Navy's fleet ballistic missile Polaris.

It is expected to be ready for testing of nose cones for Polaris by early spring.

There are only two other such tunnels in the free world. Both are located at the USAF Research and Development command's engineering center at Tullahoma, Tenn.

Career Changes Linked To Pay Increases

From first page—

26 years service and five years in permanent grade, instead of the present 28 years service.

This, like the 20-year retirements, will provoke considerable controversy.

On the one hand, some Defense Department leaders will emphasize that such changes are strongly in accord with the Cordiner Committee's appeal for improved manpower management. These officials will stress that by eliminating passed-over officers who have five years in permanent grade of lieutenant colonel or commander, there will be a strengthened guarantee that the pay premiums provided in the new pay legislation will go only to top-notch officers who merit the substantial increases.

Effect On Promotions

The further point will be made that by retiring 20-year officers and lieutenant colonels with 26 years' service, more advancement opportunities will be opened for outstanding younger officers.

These arguments will be countered by other persons who will say that 20- or 26-year careers mean reduced retirement benefits and a possible breach of contract with career officers who heretofore have been able to count on at least 28 years' service if their performance of duty merits advancement to permanent lieutenant colonel.

On Capitol Hill, some legislators have been warning that the cost of retirement pay is going up sharply and caution must be taken in this matter.

One of the legislators who has spoken out on the rising cost of retirement pay is Representative Kilday.

It was Mr. Kilday who attacked the Navy's plan to accelerate scores of retirements of captains and commanders in order to ease its critical "hump" problem.

Another likely matter that will be taken up in the drive to improve military manpower management concerns the fact that at present Army, Air Force and Marine Corps brigadier generals must be selected again for promotion to major general, with consequent pass-overs.

Navy Is Different

The Navy, on the other hand, by simple arithmetic divides its rear admirals into upper and lower half categories and progression is automatic.

Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Francis, Jr., who is in charge of manpower, reportedly has proposed that the Navy be brought under a system similar to that used in the other Services.

Other changes in the Officer Personnel Act undoubtedly will be proposed—one of them to permit out-of-line permanent promotions without passover penalties to those outside the zone and senior to the "outstanding" selectees.

As these "broad picture" actions were developing on the manpower management scene, the stage was being set at the Capitol for the start of intensive hearings on the pay raise legislation.

It is known that the highly skilled professional staff of the House Armed Services Committee has been conferring with Defense Department pay experts in advance of the formal opening of hearings.

That Representative Kilday, widely recognized as a foremost military pay authority on Capitol Hill, intends to keep an open mind on the subject is evidenced by his reluctance to make any detailed statements on the legislation pending the hearings.

One fact is obvious. From the very start of the hearings, Pentagon witnesses can count on close interrogation concerning the Administration's decision to broaden the recommendations of the Cordiner Committee in one respect and to restrict them in another.

Specifically, the legislators will demand a complete justification for the decision to provide a 6% minimum across-the-board increase for everyone on active duty with at least two years' service.

The Cordiner Report recommended pay increases for only 39% of active duty personnel. The Administration bill would give increases to 70%.

6% Assures Equity

More than $100,000,000 was involved in the President's decision to recommend the 6% minimum—doubtless reflecting his concern and that of Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy that military personnel be given comparable benefits to that asked for the Government's civilian employees.

Oppositely, however, the Administration rejected the proposal by the Cordiner Committee that retired personnel be given the benefits voted for active duty people, in accord with traditional military compensation policy.

Retired Prospects

In fact, the Administration even discarded the recommendation of Secretary McElroy that retired people be given at least the 6% pay adjustment.

About $41,000,000 is involved in a 6% increase for those on the retired lists.

The odds appear to be at least 50-50 that enactment of a pay bill will see increases voted for retired persons.

The impact of the 6% recommendation on the Cordiner Plan was a matter that the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee considered during its questioning of Secretary McElroy on broad defense problems.

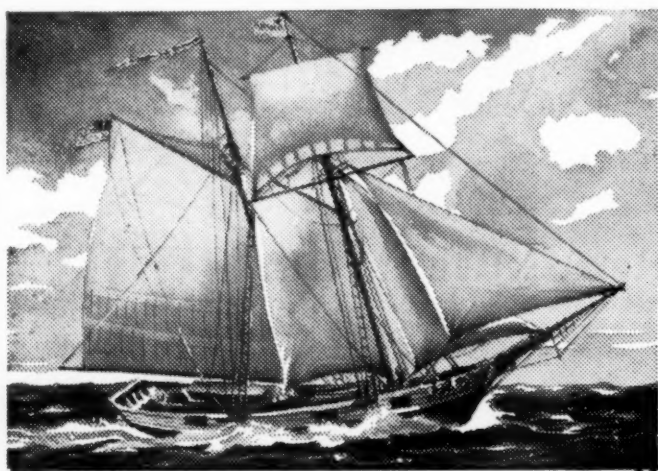

During testimony before the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee, which has endorsed an increase in career incentives, Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy was questioned about the introduction of an across-the-board 6% pay increase for everyone with at least two

Air Force Switches To T-37 Jet Trainer

Student pilots in the Air Training Command here began flying new jet training planes.

The first class to receive instruction in the dual-seat T-37, Cessna's twin jet primary trainer, is Class 59-D at Bainbridge AB, Ga. The plane is powered by two Continental J-69 engines and features side-by-side ejection seats, a "clamshell" canopy and dual control sticks and rudder pedals.

ATC has 80 of the new trainers and expects to have 350 to 400 by June 1959.

ATC Headquarters at Randolph AFB, Tex., reports that Bainbridge AB has 53 of the planes; Graham AB, Fla., has 26; and Bartow AB, Fla., one.

Under the new flying program, students will be given 30 hours flying time in the T-34 and 100 hours in the T-37.

Are We Supporting Research? The President's '59 Budget asks $106,700,000 for the research and development work of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. Last year Congress appropriated $106,000,000 for this important agency—whereas the hearings developed that the NACA had asked for $147,778,000. The new Budget asks that the '58 funds now be supplemented by an additional $11,780,000, which still leaves that agency far behind what it felt it needed to carry on its work.

In transmitting the figures to Congress, the Budget stated that the NACA funds are to "provide for an immediate expansion of research and development activities looking toward solutions of problems involving the flight of aircraft, ballistic missiles, and space vehicles."

General Orval R. Cook, USAF-Ret., President of the Aircraft Industries Association, recently commented that "One of the things that has most puzzled me during this furor and clamor for governmental reorganization so that we can catch up with the Russians, has been the fact that the NACA apparently has been largely overlooked." He then extolls the accomplishments of the NACA over its 40-year history, and states: "If we need a governmental agency to take the responsibility for accelerating our efforts in space travel, I suggest we look to an existing organization such as the NACA."

With the NACA holding such a key position in our research program, the Budget estimates must be totally unrealistic.

Working With the Committees. Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy, in his appearance before the House Armed Services Committee, has set an excellent example of helpful cooperation that may well serve as a standard for other officials of the Department. In the first place, he was well prepared. His replies to questions were clear and complete. In the few instances where he did not know the answer, he said so frankly and promised that the desired information would be forthcoming.

On information policies, the Secretary said practically everything that is not top secret is made known—sometimes through leaks. But he sees no real threat to security and feels that a man with as much power as he has should "live in a goldfish bowl."

On Congressional testimony Mr. McElroy said officers should feel free to give their personal opinions but that it would be desirable if, when they give a personal viewpoint, they would also concurrently relate it to an overall Defense Department point of view, because "this is intended to be a Defense Department team."

Mr. McElroy's cooperation with the Committee and his recognition of the members' responsibility for the National Defense was appreciated by the Committeemen. A number of them congratulated him on his testimony and his attitude. In response he said (and this should be a model for witnesses who follow):

"If you have had any satisfaction from my testimony, I would like also to say that I have had a great deal of satisfaction from the questions that have been asked. I think they are appropriate. I think some of them have made the wheels go around and screech a little as they were working. But these things, these questions, help a Secretary clarify his own thinking, too. These are searching questions. By the time I get done with this discussion . . . I am satisfied that I will understand a good deal more clearly what I am after."

rage of strategically placed questions on the operations of the Army-Air Force Exchange Service. It is no secret that some powerful retail merchant groups, rebuffed last year in frontal attacks on PX activities before the House Armed Services Committee, are likely to try a flanking maneuver in the Appropriations Committees.

If Department of Defense spokesmen appearing before the Appropriations Committees make themselves acquainted with the facts, they will be able to handle without difficulty any and all questions on Exchange activities.

It would appear logical that the retail merchant groups will seek through contacts on the Appropriations Committees to handicap the Ex-

Presidential Benefits

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

A constituent sent Senator Neuberger a copy of your editorial of December 14th entitled, "Restore the President's Stars."

I thought that you and your readers would be interested in S. 607 which passed the Senate unanimously last February 4th. This legislation provides that former Presidents of the United States shall receive an allowance of $25,000 per year, and provides for a staff, an office, and free mailing privileges. The widow of a former President would receive $10,000 per year.

The benefits provided in S. 607 are considerably more than President Eisenhower would receive as a five star general following his retirement from the Presidency. S. 607 would also provide benefits for all our former living Presidents, Harry Truman and Herbert Hoover.

This legislation is now before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee and hearings were held last year.

With best wishes,

WALTER H. DODD,
ASSISTANT TO
SENATOR NEUBERGER

Reserve-Regular Equalization

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The circumstances under which the Regular officer and the Reserve officer serve on active duty should be equalized. Now that we are in a new year and Congress has reconvened, it is imperative that the Air Force request appropriate legislation to enact the following:

a. Legislation to permit force retirement of Regulars at 20 years instead of 28 years.

b. Equalization of severance pay (Regular gets 2 mos. for each year while the Reservist gets ½ month for each year after serving 5 years to qualify).

c. Adoption of policy or secure legislation to consider Regulars right along with Reservists for future RIFs; after several years' observation I have found the ineffectives about evenly distributed among both categories.

d. Legislation to establish one permanent promotion list to include authority for Reservists to change their active duty rank upon receiving permanent promotion (as the Regular now does). The time and qualifications are the same as now written in both laws.

1st FA Association

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The 1st Field Artillery Association was organized 7 Dec. 1957 at Ft. Sill, Okla.

The organization is to be composed of persons who were assigned to the old Regiment prior to Pearl Harbor Day 1941. The association is in actual being with officers elected for 1958 and 47 members. It is hoped that many more will be heard from in the ensuing months. A reunion in the offing and our sights are set for a large attendance.

Eligible persons may obtain a copy of the first news bulletin which was published 1 January by sending a postal card with name and address to: Secretary, 1st Field Artillery Association, PO Box 1646, Ft. Sill, Okla.

change Service's program of help to military families by elimination of all appropriated support for post and base exchanges and ship service stores. This would affect most drastically the exchanges overseas. One result undoubtedly would be that exchange managers abroad, in order to carry out their mission to military families, would be forced to rely more heavily on foreign-purchased products at the expense of American manufacturers.

Another fact which will convince economy-minded members of Congress that the present support of the Exchange Service should be continued, is that some $56 million in profits was turned over last year by the exchanges to military commanders for use in important morale-building programs, such as libraries, day rooms, hobby shops and gymnasium equipment.

The Exchange Service has demonstrated that its carefully supervised global operations and the effect of its operations on military morale and combat effectiveness, will win Congressional support when all the facts can be presented.

What is to be feared—and Department of Defense officials must be prepared for such a development—is a backstage effort in the closed door sessions of the Appropriations Committees to sneak through restrictive riders after only cursory hearings.

Fortunately, the Armed Services Committees in the House and Senate during the past several years have fought hard against legislative riders in the Appropriations Committees on military activities. But the Department of Defense must be prepared to defend itself, if necessary, and not count on the watchful Armed Services Committees to do the job.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (31 Jan. 1948)—Republican leaders in the House of Representatives this week definitely bypassed—at least for the remainder of this session—the Universal Military Training program urged by President Truman, a bi-partisan group in Congress, and the leadership of the Armed Services.

50 Years Ago (1 Feb. 1908)—The House Military Committee has not yet taken up the pay bill, and will not do so until after completion of work on the appropriation bill.

90 Years Ago (1 Feb. 1868)—The question of Army reduction is probably settled. We are given to understand, on good authority, that no change in the Army organization is likely to be attempted until the reconstruction of the Union shall have been completed by the formal restoration to it of the Southern States.

Military Budgeting And Forces' Administration Face New Reorganization Changes, Apportionment Power Is A Center Of Controversy At Pentagon And Capitol

STREAMLINED budget procedures and increased administrative authority for Secretary of Defense McElroy will be considered in connection with present Pentagon reorganization plans.

High Administration officials foresee structural changes in the Defense Department as necessarily involving major revisions in the way present military programs are budgeted and administered.

Firm plans for changing budget and administration procedures have not yet been formulated. They will depend on the findings of the high-level committee recently appointed by Secretary of Defense McElroy to study the problem (THE JOURNAL, 25 January).

The Budget Bureau, which will probably be consulted on these changes, has so far made no comment.

New Proposals

To date, various budget and administrative proposals have been put forth. They include:

- Changing the role of the Secretary of Defense in relation to the Services to give him greater personal authority instead of requiring committee coordination. This would probably require changes in present law which requires the Services to be administered separately.

- Developing a more integrated planning program for the Military Departments.

- Revamping budget terminology and classification to reflect more accurately the Service roles and missions.

- Providing greater flexibility in funding between the Services and between Armed Forces projects. This also would provide greater authority for the Secretary of Defense.

Budget Bureau officials say they have no specific plan in mind. Their policy is to wait and see what changes would be of most benefit to the Nation's defense structure.

Who Holds the Ax?

Countering statements by top Armed Forces officers that Budget Bureau officials have slowed the nation's defense effort by limiting the funds allotted to critical programs, a BoB official said that most budget adjusting is done before the proposals ever get to them. And after Congress has appropriated the money, they said, they "very seldom withhold it from the Armed Services when their programs have been firmed up and approved."

Other views of the matter are held by the Navy Chief of Ordnance, RADM. F. S. Withington, and Lt. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, USA-Ret., who directed the WW II Atom bomb project.

Recent press reports have quoted Admiral Withington on the budget problem: "It's not the money, but control of the money. Sometimes I don't think I am Chief of Ordnance, but rather that some clerk in the Budget Bureau is. You can quote me on that."

General Groves, speaking before a recent meeting of the American Ordnance Association (THE JOURNAL, 7 December 1957) said that "One wonders why the Bureau of the Budget should be so controlling in matters affecting national defense."

Replying to Admiral Withington, Percival F. Brundage, Budget Bureau Director, said: "The Bureau of the Budget is not holding up any funds voted by the Congress for the Bureau of Ordnance or for missiles. All of the funds that have been appropriated or made available for these purposes for the fiscal year 1958 have been apportioned in accordance with the requests from the Department of Defense."

Bureau officials disclaim the credit or the blame for the inability of many Service officials to get the funds they say are needed. They do not formulate the nation's defense policy, they say, but only coordinate the programs of the Federal Government and give financial expression to the policies already decided upon by the nation's leaders.

Total national policy, they say, is formed by the President with the aid of the Cabinet and the National Security Council. It is only after this policy has been formed, they say, that the Bureau is called in to translate it into financial terms.

18 Month Head Start

Theoretically, the budget process for any given year starts 18 months in advance with each government department dispatching program guidance to the field and requesting budget estimates.

Within a couple of months the field information should have been received by each of the departments and they should have convened top-drawer advisory committees to review the total budget structure with the Department Secretary.

About 14 months before the budget is submitted to Congress, the individual Service Secretaries assemble their information and submit their budget requests through the Department of Defense. Thirteen months before the program goes to Congress, joint Budget Bureau and Department of Defense committees meet in the Pentagon to iron out the final budget presentation and resolve any conflicting views.

Final Review Action

The budget then goes to the President and the National Security Council for final review and approval before it is presented to Congress.

A timetable similar to this is followed by all Government Departments.

The Department of Defense, because of rapidly changing technology and military demands, is allowed a great deal of leeway in the budget schedule, which is not given to other government agencies. Many items of the Department of Defense budget are not submitted until just a few months before Congress is ready to consider the appropriation.

The joint budget meetings between the Bureau and the Department of Defense are another unique and time-saving part of the preparation of the military budget. Other government departments must submit their budget through separate conferences on the departmental and Budget Bureau levels.

The Pie Is Cut

After Congress has appropriated the funds, the Bureau again goes into action in apportioning the money throughout the fiscal year. In this respect, it decides, after consultation with the department concerned, just how much money should be made available during each quarter of the year.

In the apportionment process, Bureau officials say, they seldom withhold any money requested by the operating agencies once the program decisions are firm.

"Most of the adjustment," one official declared, "is done by the departments themselves before being presented to the Bureau for review." Reapportionments in budgeted funds, he said, reflect changes in Armed Service roles and missions, and the relative importance attached to various military functions.

He noted that Defense officials and high officials in each of the services are the ones who actually do the monetary adjusting. "This is generally caused," he said, "by new developments and changing priorities. This, some people say, puts the Bureau in the position of 'whipping-boy' for many decisions in which it had no original part."

Great Monetary Authority

Bureau officials admit they have great authority over monetary matters in all the military departments. This power, that of withholding funds and determining the relative balance to be allotted to different agencies, they say, is used very sparingly, generally when program changes are involved. It is always exercised in consultation with the department concerned.

Located at the apex of the governmental hierarchy, in the Executive Office of the President, the Bureau is essentially a staff agency and functions only to carry out policy set by the Chief Executive. Its close relation to the President is emphasized by its location in the Executive Office Building in Washington, overlooking the White House.

The Bureau was established in 1921 to give the President greater control over the individual departmental budgets of the executive branch of the government, and to take the burden of coordinating governmental fiscal programs off the shoulders of Congress.

Prior to 1921, Bureau officials note, each government department submitted separate budget requests to Congress, which was then confronted with the problem of assembling the many documents into a meaningful whole.

Apportionment Not New

The apportionment function of the Bureau has existed since the beginning of the century. Originally exercised by the head of each agency, the apportionment responsibility was transferred to the Budget Director in 1933.

However, Presidents have withheld funds from governmental agencies independently of the Bureau's apportioning authority. An example of this, say Bureau officials, is former President Truman's action in delaying the use of funds for aircraft procurement in 1949.

Congressional Protests

Some Members of Congress have charged that their Constitutional responsibility for funding Armed Forces activities is endangered by the fact that the Budget Bureau, through the apportionment process, can overrule Congressional action.

This situation developed last year when apportionment required the Air Force to curtail flying programs that had received prior Budget Bureau and Congressional approval.

There is no doubt that much more will be heard about the Budget Bureau's control over appropriated funds as Congress takes up whatever changes in Defense Department reorganization require legislative consideration.

Can Military Officers Speak Freely On Capitol Hill? SecDef Says Yes

ARE military officers free to give their own opinions in appearances before Congressional committees? Are they punished when they do? Are they guilty of insubordination?

These questions were answered by Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy during closed-door meetings of the House Armed Services Committee.

Here is what he had to say on the subject:

"We have had some get-togethers of the Chiefs of Staff and the Secretaries to discuss this matter of how we appear before committees. My statement to these men has been that, as far as I am concerned, 'you testify so you can live with yourself,' because that is, to me, the most important thing any of us have to do."

"You may have enemies; you may have people that disapprove of you, but if, after you get done with however you have conducted yourself in the course of a day, you may not be too enthusiastic about some of the things you have done, but if you can live with yourself, that is about my way at least, of kind of running my own personal conduct. I have said the same thing to these men."

"Now, I would say that it would be a desirable thing to me, if, in expressing testimony, the officers in the Services, even though expressing a strictly Service point of view, would also concurrently relate that to an overall point of view, because this is intended to be a Defense Department team. It is not supposed to be completely separate Services, without any relationship to the Department of Defense."

"But the answer to your question is there is no attempt to tell these men what they are to say."

"We certainly tell them to tell the truth. That would be obvious. And, despite the fact that I think there has been a suggestion that maybe one of the officers who has been in the papers a good deal might have been disciplined for testimony, I have no knowledge of that, and I would believe that there would be no substance to that accusation at all."

Representative Toby Morris (D-Okla) told Secretary McElroy "no officer should be subject to any punishment or reprisals of any kind if he comes here and opens up his mind and his heart and tells us something that is necessary for us to know in the defense of this Nation."

Secretary McElroy said, "I certainly agree with that. If the truth indicates that we are wrong, then we ought to get right." He added, "And I don't expect always to be right."

"LIFE IN A GOLDFISH BOWL"

Many powerful members of Congress believe too much vital defense information escapes from under the Pentagon roof. Others, just as powerful, think the Pentagon attempts to withhold information which should be released.

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy has told the House Armed Services Committee that little goes on in the Pentagon, except for top secret matters, that is not known outside at a fairly early stage, but he thinks "there is no violation of real security."

He said one of the facts of life he has learned since taking on his new job is that "there must be a fair amount of discussion and chatter."

And, perhaps it is not a bad idea, he said. For an office which involves as much power as the office of the Secretary of Defense, "You probably ought to live in a goldfish bowl."

memo

THE SERVICES WILL BE HEARTENED by publication of SecDef McElroy's views (Page 11) regarding responsibilities of military men called to testify on Capitol Hill. His remarks will be used as a guideline by officers who will be going to Capitol Hill during the next weeks to testify on the military budget. Many will say, in response to questions, that funding for particular projects is considerably below the original requests. They will add, however, that it is necessary to relate specific deficiencies to the overall budget problem.

A SERIOUS DIFFICULTY of late has been the fact that only summary statements of closed door Congressional sessions—not the security-cleared transcripts—were released to the press. The House Armed Services Committee fortunately elected to avoid flashy summary statements until transcripts could be made available to newsmen, including Secretary McElroy's remarks on demeanor of Service witnesses on Capitol Hill.

THE FAVORABLE IMPRESSION that Secretary McElroy has made in his appearances on Capitol Hill augur well for his kick-off testimony on the military pay legislation. He will say that perhaps some modifications may be necessary, and will stress the cooperation of the Department of Defense in working out compromises.

THE AIR FORCE GETS A NEW BARK 1 March when a Sentry Dog Training School opens at Lackland AFB, Tex. The "graduates" are earmarked for SAC bases to join more than 800 Air Force dogs at 31 ZI and 5 overseas bases. The Army had been training dogs for both Services, but closed its kennels because of a reduced requirement.

NAVY JAG OFFICERS HOPE Congress will look with favor on a proposal to create a new flag billet for the Assistant Navy JAG. Only one Navy JAG officer holds flag rank. He is Radm Chester C. Ward, who heads the Navy's legal organization. Both the Army and the Air Force have two major general JAG's and Assistant JAG's. In addition, the Army and Air Force have four one-star officers serving in JAG billets—a total of six generals each.

THE ARMY'S DRIVE TO SPUR INTEREST among outstanding enlisted men in obtaining commissions is paying off. Put into motion by General Willard G. Wyman, head of the Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va., "Operation Challenge" in 5 months has resulted in 226 commissions for enlisted men, with 737 applications still pending.

PROSPECTIVE CHANGES in the Officer Personnel Act (Page 1) undoubtedly will raise anew a Congressional look at the lack of uniformity among the Services in retirement ranks. This is occasioned by the fact that the Navy and Marine Corps are authorized to give so-called "hero" promotions to retiring officers who have been decorated in combat. The Army and Air Force give no such advancements.

ONE IMPORTANT ADVANTAGE of the higher rank action by the Navy and Marine Corps is the added prestige its officers have when it comes to obtaining civilian positions. Thus, Navy captains frequently are retired with the title—though not the pay—of rear admiral.

SENATOR MARGARET CHASE SMITH (R-Me), a member of the Armed Services Committee who recently scraped the Air Force for using Idaho potatoes at Loring AFB in her State, has probed in the past the reasons why the Navy lacks a one-star rank, and has no selection from lower half to upper half rear admiral. The Pentagon will not be surprised if she resumes this inquiry.

THE SENATE PREPAREDNESS SUBCOMMITTEE'S unanimous appeal for action to "provide increased incentives for the retention of trained personnel in the military services" has emphasized the point that the pending $518,000,000 military pay bill will have strong backers and that it will not become a partisan issue. Significantly, the Administration pay bill was introduced by Senator Russell (D-Ga.), the Armed Services Committee Chairman, and by Senator Saltonstall (R-Mass.), ranking minority member.

ON THE HOUSE SIDE, where hearings likely will begin about mid-February, Service families also can count on a completely non-partisan approach to the pay problem. Although the RIF situation has not helped the Cordiner Plan, as was reported in last week's issue, it can be stated that Representative Brooks (D-La.), who strongly criticized the Pentagon for the force-outs, is a staunch supporter of the new pay plan. One reason he was so concerned about the RIF situation is the adverse effect it could have on the pay legislation.

NO FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENTS ARE LIKELY, but the Army soon will begin reducing its overseas strength, largely in overhead units, in Europe and the Pacific. This is essential to meet new manpower ceilings. One result will be the elimination of some headquarters units.

MORE THAN A SCORE of Army and Air Force installations will be shut down to save money. Many will be relatively small, but some will be large-sized facilities. This will be difficult to accomplish without strong protests from Capitol Hill. In an election year, no Congressman wants a military operation in his district or state eliminated.

WAVES ARE SHOPPING for a new Summer uniform. Expressions of dissatisfaction with the present Summer garb have been registered with the Navy. WAVES feel that the uniform is too difficult to keep neat. High on the list of possible replacements is a hang-up-and-dry dacron-cotton blend material.

A STRONG CASE will be made by the Army in support of the need for fast jet observation aircraft as a result of "Project Long Arm" now under way. The Army is using three Cessna T-37 jet trainers, loaned by the Air Force, for the test. Once, the Army was given authority to purchase 11 of the jet trainers, but this was rescinded and the Army was allowed to borrow some of the planes from the Air Force. If nothing else, the loan has permitted the Army to qualify some of its pilots in jets.

MILITARY LEADERS WILL HAIL the forthright statement by Deputy SecDef Quarles that "fixing the budget is a political decision in which security must be balanced against other services and all in relation to the taxes to be levied." A big problem in the past has been that top DoD civilians have contended that the military budget was not fixed by a politically set ceiling.

A CURIOUS FISCAL FACT, however, is that a rare time when the public was told of a fixed budget ceiling, the limit was lifted. Former SecDef Wilson stated that the fiscal '59 budget would be held to $38 billion. Then came Sputnik.

Appeals Court Boosts Retired Pay of Two

The U. S. Court of Appeals has held that Reserve officers retired from active duty for physical disability are entitled to retired pay based on the highest "permanent" Reserve rank held at the time of retirement even though they never served in that rank on active duty.
In the cases of Lt. Col. Charles C. Budd,
AUS-Ret., and Maj. Clarence T. Lowell,
USAF-Ret., the Court awarded judgment for the difference between the officers' retired pay and retired pay in the next higher grade.

Both were retired in the grade in which they served on active duty, although they held the "permanent" reserve grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel, respectively at the time of their retirement.
They never served on active duty in the higher grades.

The cases were decided under the provisions of the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

Army Selects 836 In ANC-AMSC For Field Grade Permanent Promotions

THE Army has selected three Nurses—Inez Haynes, Ruth G. Bradley and Ruby F. Bryant—for permanent colonel rank, and has chosen 10 permanent majors in the ANC and 10 in the AMSC for permanent lieutenant colonel.

At the same time, the Army selected 762 permanent captains in the Nurse Corps for regular rank of major and 51 in the AMSC for permanent major.

The promotions result from the legislation enacted last year that was designed to eliminate discrimination against members of the ANC and AMSC in career promotions.

Army officials told Congress that heretofore it has been possible for Nurses and AMSC officers to count on reaching only permanent captain, on the average, before retirement. Now, most will advance at least to permanent major over a career.

DoD Establishes New Missile Range

The Defense Department has established a National Pacific Missile Range to be used for testing all types of missiles and the training of their crews.

The new range, to be managed by the Navy for all branches of the Armed Forces, extends along the California coast, from the Santa Barbara area about 500 miles southwest into the ocean west of Mexico.

The breadth of the missile tracking area, including offshore islands and tracking ships, is about 250 miles.

The Navy emphasized that the new range is not a duplication of the Cape Canaveral, Fla., range. The Cape Canaveral range, managed by the Air Force, will continue to specialize in research and development.

Although the offshore range-complex is 500 by 250 miles, the Navy said the lanes will extend thousands of miles seaward when IRBMs and ICBMs are fired.

Headquarters for the new establishment will be at the Naval Air Test Center, Point Mugu, Calif. By 1960 the number of military and civilian personnel assigned to the range will be 14,000, an increase of 10,000 over the number now at Point Mugu.

Fuel Purchases For Services Face '59 Jump; Petroleum Agency Contracts Exceed Billion

Record demands for the services of the Military Petroleum Supply Agency, Washington, D. C., the Armed Forces' single manager for all petroleum products, will be created by dispersal of SAC wings and increased flying and steaming hours throughout the Air Force and Navy.

Military purchases of petroleum supplies will reach their peak during Fiscal Year 1959.

New evaluations of strategic plans could mean an overall increase in fuel storage facilities and a reshuffling of some of those already in existence, cautious Defense Department officials report.

Shouldering the burden of the mushrooming fuel activity will be RADM O. P. Lattu, SC, USN, MPSA Executive Director, and his staff of 156 civilians and 21 military officers drawn from the three Services. Capt. C. A. LaFarge, SC, USN, is Deputy Executive Director.

Admiral Lattu

Full Agency Is Unique

MPSA holds a unique position among the military's single managers in that it does buy or stock the products used. These functions are handled by each of the Services.

Primary purpose of the Agency is to coordinate all military petroleum needs. It sees that each of the military Departments gets what it needs when it needs it. Thus, a major portion of MPSA's effort is devoted to contracting worldwide for petroleum products and storage facilities. MPSA also coordinate redistribution of surplus fuel stocks for all the services.

After MPSA has awarded its contracts, the actual orders for delivery of the products are placed by the individual services who pay for them out of their own budgeted funds. Within CONUS, wherever economical to do so, petroleum products are shipped direct from the contractor's facilities to each consuming installation.

Contracts More Than A Billion Dollars

During Fiscal Year 1957 Admiral Lattu's organization issued 2,300 contracts for the procurement of petroleum. This represented supply action on approximately 25,000 line items of demand. The total value of all contracts was over one and a quarter billion dollars.

Biggest user of petroleum products and services was the Air Force, whose total contracts amounted to $684.5 million. This was 54.5 per cent of all military petroleum procurements.

The Navy contracted for $375.5 million worth of petroleum products and services or 29.9 per cent of the total. Army contracts amounted to $196.3 million, or 15.6 per cent.

These figures, Admiral Lattu said, do not reflect the substantial volume of cross-servicing which occurs. In some areas of the world, he explained, one Service may place the orders for all the petroleum requirements and then "resell" the products to the two other military departments.

Jet fuels accounted for the largest purchases during FY 1957. Navy Special, Aviation Gas, Diesel Fuel and MoGas followed in that order.

Use 670,000 Barrels Daily

Emphasizing the tremendous scope of the military fuel operation, Admiral Lattu noted that the military's petroleum requirement in 1957 was 670,000 barrels daily. This is expected to decrease to 622,000 barrels daily during the current fiscal year, but will reach a peak of 735,000 barrels per day in FY 1959.

In addition to meeting operational and reserve petroleum requirements of the Armed Forces, MPSA contracts for commercial services, such as storage terminals, needed in the large-scale fuel operation. Present storage contracts alone total 124 and represent an annual expenditure of over $13 million.

Changes Expected

To meet special problems peculiar to petroleum purchasing, MPSA officials expect to effect major contract revisions beginning this July.

In one of the changes, contract inspection provisions will be revamped to delineate more clearly the responsibilities of the contractors and to further establish performance standards. Other changes are expected to clarify delivery terms, quantity determinations and the types of changes authorized by the "Changes" clause.

All contract revisions, Agency officials say, are designed to bring MPSA procedures into closer conformity with current petroleum industry practices.

How MPSA Buys

Most Agency contracts, Admiral Lattu said, are of the "open end," indefinite quantity variety. Under these contracts the Services' obligation is limited to purchasing a specified minimum amount of product.

Recent cut-backs have had an "appreciable impact" on existing "open end" contracts.

During the period 1 April to 30 September 1957, the Armed Forces ordered 24 per cent less jet fuel than they had planned. Orders placed against aviation gasoline contracts were approximately 26 per cent less than had been anticipated.

Advertising and sealed bid procedures said the Admiral, are used wherever possible. Currently, this method of procurement accounts for about 60 per cent the Agency's contract awards in the S. As part of its over-all job of standardizing petroleum operations for the military, MPSA, in cooperation with the Services, has prepared and will publish the petroleum section of the "Federal Supply Catalog." By eliminating duplicated items, the new catalog will cut 10 items from the present 1,423 not in military stock lists. Eventually, the Agency hopes to cut the list down to a maximum of 700 items. Another measure taken to insure greater uniformity among the Services will be the publication of a revised petroleum inspection manual this Spring. It will serve as a guide for the 250 (18 Army, 119 Air Force and 73 Navy) inspectors now working in the complex field of petroleum.

No Operational Changes Sought

The single manager for petroleum is the Secretary of the Navy, the Honorable Thomas S. Gates, jr. MPSA is the operating agency established by the Secretary. In the Navy's organizational set-up it functions directly under RADM. Ralph J. Arnold, SC, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. In everyday operation it works closely with the POL staffs of all the Services and the Petroleum Logistics Division (PLD) of the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Supply and Logistics. It is in the PLD that high-level petroleum policy is developed. Admiral Lattu's compact, 177-man unit is housed in the Navy's Bureau of Harbors and Docks Building near the Pentagon.

The Agency is still a young organization, Admiral Lattu said. It took over the duties and functions of the former Armed Services Petroleum Purchasing Agency only a little over one year ago.

Benefit From Experience

"Before recommending any major changes in our operations," he said, "we would like to have the benefit of more time and experience."

"On the whole," he added, "I am very well satisfied with MPSA operations. We have met every requirement of each of the Services and produced the products when and where they wanted them. That this was accomplished is a tribute to the hard working civilian and military personnel of the Agency and the cooperation extended by the Department of Defense, the Services, MSTs and the Petroleum Industry."

The MPSA staff includes:
Systems Planning Division: Cdr. J. J.

Admiral's Son Satellite "Expert"

RADM. Onnie P. Lattu, USN, has been with the Military Petroleum Supply since it was established in 1956.

He assumed the post of Executive Director in June of 1956, six months before the Agency began full scale operations.

Prior to that time he served as Assistant Chief of the Navy Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. During WWII he served in a variety of logistics billets with the Pacific Fleet.

In 1940 he was named Assistant Naval Attache in Berlin, where he remained until the exchange of diplomatic internees in 1942.

Admiral Lattu is married to the former Arlene Ringer of Bronxville, N. Y. They have two sons, Peter Hodgkins, age 10 ("an expert on Satellites and space flight," says the admiral) and Gordon Ringer Lattu, age 7.

of justice to people, since there has been an increase in compensation, there has been an increase of about this much in the cost of living.

"And then the question was," Mr. McElroy continued, "are you going to give the 6% to everybody and then put all the Cordiner principles on top and it started to get into very high numbers of money."

The Secretary conceded that the combining of the Cordiner recommendations with the 6% cost-of-living adjustment has resulted in "really some difficulty" in explaining the marriage of two ideas, "instead of the clean-cut presentation of one."

Mr. McElroy told the Senators: "I would believe that Ralph Cordiner is not terribly happy about this fact either."

Congress Reads RIF Editorial In Journal

An editorial in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL which discussed the adverse impact of the Pentagon's decision not to delay previously announced officer force-outs was inserted in the Congressional Record 28 January by Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.).

Mr. Brooks is Chairman of the Armed Services Subcommittee which held hearings on the RIF situation.

The Louisiana legislator said: "This is a very well written editorial and I recommend it to the Members of the House for reading and study."

Impact Of The Sputniks Told In New Volume

Members of the Armed Forces will be particularly interested in a newly-published book, "The Challenge of the Sputniks," edited by Mr. Richard Witkin, Aviation Editor of the New York Times.

Widely recognized as an authority on the U. S. missile effort as a result of scores of stories and national surveys on Army, Navy and Air Force weapons programs, Mr. Witkin has provided cogent comments to introduce and link important articles, interviews and speeches on the impact of the Sputniks.

Mr. Witkin's book, a Doubleday Headline Publication (96 pages, $1.50) provides a concise and dramatic recapitulation of how the United States has responded to the Soviet achievements.

As Mr. Witkin writes in his introduction: "This is early history on a new age of man."

years service to the Cordiner Committee proposals.

The Secretary said that President Ralph J. Cordiner of the General Electric Company was opposed to the 6% adjustment when the Secretary last spoke with him.

The Defense chief was questioned whether the Administration put the 6% increase in the bill in order to make its passage through Congress easier.

Secretary McElroy replied: "No. I think there was also the feeling

Term Retention Change

Congress will consider the Term Retention Contract legislation for Reserve officers separately from the military pay bill.

It was part of the pay bill as sent to the Capitol. However, Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.) has introduced a separate measure (H.R. 10171) to authorize contracts for Reservists. Hearings will be held on this measure at an early date—possibly next week. THE JOURNAL issue of 8 February will publish details of this legislation.

Now flying—the new multi-mission Lockheed JETSTAR

—the answer to the urgent need for a jet utility trainer-transport.

Designed for a variety of Jet Age military missions, the Lockheed JETSTAR is a utility jet transport that flies 500-550 mph, at altitudes up to 45,000 feet for distances of 1,800 statute miles or more.

Amazingly quiet (due to aft fuselage mounting of engine jet pods) the new JETSTAR will be powered with two Wright TJ37 engines—or with four General Electric J85's or Fairchild J83's.

The JETSTAR carries a full complement of radio and navigation gear and is fully pressurized and air conditioned.

Like all Lockheed planes, the new JETSTAR is easy to maintain and economical to operate. And it has the inherent stamina to insure optimum utilization and long life—qualities that are more important in military aircraft today than ever before.
